Construction has started on a new Lakeway Drive Bridge over Interstate 35 that will replace a functionally obsolete two-lane structure. The Texas Department of Transportation project got underway in December.

Georgetown Mayor George Garver says, "This is one of the most important projects in the improvement of our transportation network. The existing bridge has no pedestrian [walkways] and no bike lanes, and the number of accidents is way out of proportion to what it should be."

Safety concerns were a primary reason to replace the existing bridge, which is at a skewed angle and has steep inclines that limit sight distances. The narrow bridge was the scene of 28 motor vehicle accidents from June 2009 through April 2011.

A recent traffic count tallied 6,500 trips per day across the two-lane bridge. "It will be a great addition to our city to help people move from one side to the other," says Garver. Lakeway Drive is the only I-35 crossing in the 4.6-mile segment between Williams Drive and Texas 195.

Last May, the Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization

board unanimously approved federal funding for the bridge. "I'm very pleased that TXDOT, CAMPO, and the City have worked hard to make this bridge a reality," says Garver, who is on the 19-member CAMPO board.

The new Lakeway Drive Bridge, which will be constructed just south of the current one, will have a total of six lanes, including two through-traffic lanes and a left turn lane in each direction. To accommodate bicycles, the bridge will have 14-foot wide outside lanes and there will be sidewalks on each side for pedestrians.

The project will include a new ramp for the northbound Lakeway Drive exit that will be about 1,200 feet south of the current 264 exit ramp. The new exit ramp configuration on the east side of I-35 will improve traffic flow for vehicles taking the ramp and turning left onto Austin Avenue. On the west side of I-35, the southbound access road will be straightened at the intersection.

The cost of the new bridge is estimated at $10.25 million, including $5.75 million in federal funding from CAMPO, $2 million from TXDOT for utility relocations, and $2.5 million from Georgetown Transportation Enhancement Corporation, which is funded through a 0.5 percent sales tax in Georgetown.

The construction company for the project is Ballenger Construction, headquartered in Harlingen. Completion is projected for spring 2013.

Intersection improvement

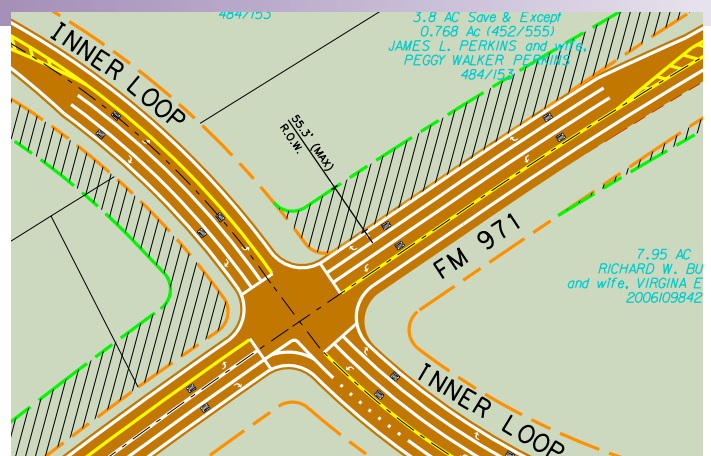

FM 971 and NE Inner Loop

Intersection improvements at FM 971 and NE Inner Loop are set to begin by February. The project will add right and left turn lanes to all corners of the intersection and a continuous travel lane on NE Inner Loop to the driveway for Forbes Middle School and Cooper Elementary School.

Sources of funding for the project by the Texas Department of Transportation and City of Georgetown are a $343,000 Congressional earmark federal grant and 2008 City of Georgetown voter-approved road bonds.

The project is designed to conform to the ultimate four-lane roadway design for FM 971 as approved by TXDOT and Georgetown voters. Completion of the intersection improvement is projected for September.

DiFusion Tech 4A Agreement

DiFusion Technologies, a medical device company at the Texas
Life-sciences Collaboration Center, will be acquiring a key piece of equipment as a result of a performance agreement with the Georgetown Economic Development Corporation. The agreement for an $80,000 mass spectrometer was approved by the city council in December.

The 4A corporation agreement sets job creation benchmarks for DiFusion, which will use the spectrometer to conduct highly sensitive chemical analysis in the development of orthopedic implants.

This acquisition represents the initiation of a planned expansion of the TLCC to include additional laboratory space in the existing TLCC
building," says Russ Peterman,
executive director for the center.

"The expansion also entails the construction of a new technical building for additional wet lab
space, sterile manufacturing space,
and nanotechnology clean rooms."
